Dear [Mr./Ms./Mx.] [Hiring Manager's Name],
Please accept my enclosed application for the position of administrative assistant at [Company Name]. Having read through your job description, I am thrilled to be applying for this position as my 3 years of experience and skillset match the requirements you're looking for.
At my current company, Redford & Sons, I am valued by the CEO and his staff as a critical support pillar for the team—keeping meetings, papers, travel arrangements, and office items organized at all times. I have spearheaded the efforts to "go digital" for almost all planning and paperwork, increasing office efficiency to the point of saving $1000 per year in contracted labor expenses. Allow me to highlight three bullet points from my resume that I believe demonstrate why I am the perfect candidate for this position:
• Trained two administrative assistants during a period of company expansion, ensuring that they pay explicit attention to company policies and minute details.
• Maintained utmost discretion when dealing with sensitive topics.
• Typed documents such as correspondence, drafts, memos, and emails, and prepared three reports weekly for management.
My resume goes into more detail about my daily job duties and achievements during my tenure as an administrative assistant at two companies. However, I believe that these bullet points demonstrate that I have the ability to perform the major administrative assistant duties, and train others to how to perform this role effectively, should the need arise.
I would love to have the opportunity to join the team at [Company Name] and use my skills to create an efficient, stress-free office environment for your executives. I believe that I can meet and exceed the expectations that you have for this role. I look forward to speaking more with you about my candidacy. Feel free to contact me at any time.
Sincerely,
[Your Name]

Dear Mr / Ms Student

Trade Practices Commission
P O Box 25
Cberra, ACT 2600

Application of s 152CP of the Trade Practices Act 1974

In October 2008 Commission was notified by Froggy Communications Ltd that negotiations between Froggy Communications and National Telephony Ltd over access by Froggy Communications to National Telephony's network had broken down. Froggy Communications then requested that we use our powers under part XIX of the Trade Practices Act 1974 to arbitrate between Froggy Communications and National Telephony.

However, we are concerned that should the Commission, exercising its arbitration powers, make a determination under s 152CP of the Act requiring National Telephony to provide access to Froggy Communications, the determination might be subject to challenge on the ground that it amounts to an acquisition of property from National Telephony. Is this correct and, if so, upon what basis would compensation have to be paid to National Telephony – could we take the public interest into account in determining such compensation?

We would be grateful to receive your advice by 2 May 2009.
Yours sincerely

Writing a warning letter can be a good way of avoiding court proceedings. It may be easiest to send the warning letter by email as you can print a copy. For example: to allow you to return to the home to get your belongings to move out of the family home to give you permission to take the children abroad on holiday to pay you some money that you are entitled to When should you not send a warning letter? Sometimes it will not be safe or appropriate to send a warning letter and you may need to go straight to court without informing the respondent. If you are posting the letter, remember to make a copy. It may be that the warning letter resolves the issue. Only send a warning letter if you have an address or email address where you can be reasonably sure the recipient will receive it. Make sure you keep copies of your warning letter Include in your letter a date by which you expect a reply or action to be taken, if appropriate Try not to engage in any other dialogue or correspondence which may confuse your position If your letter is ignored and the problem continues, you should make your application to court When you make your application you should also provide the court with a copy of your warning letter and any response you received and evidence that the letter was ignored If you send the letter by post, it may be helpful to send it by special delivery or other tracked delivery service. If you send the letter by email, it may be helpful to request a 'delivery receipt' and 'read receipt'. Examples of situations where it may not be safe to send a warning letter include: There may be other reasons why it is not safe to send a warning letter. If possible, seek legal advice before sending a warning letter. This is so that you can check the email was delivered and that the other party has read the email. Keep hold of the receipts so that you can show them to the court if you need to. You may wish to write to someone to ask them to stop doing something. Top tips for writing warning letters Only send a warning letter if safe to do so. If you are unsure whether it is safe, do not send the letter and get advice about obtaining an injunction. If the letter does not resolve the issue then you can make an application to court. This legal guide will give you information about how and when to write a warning letter. This will show the court that you have tried to resolve the issue amicably and that the other party was aware of your wishes and feelings but chose to ignore them.
